

Case study

Risk Advisory & Support

Demands and Threats

Psychiatric support

A student became fixated on their tutor.

A student was not happy with the results they had been awarded, became fixated on their tutor and made irrational demands and threats. With the assistance of HR and a retained psychiatrist a support and disengagement strategy was developed. The considered implementation of the strategy removed the threat to the tutor and put a programme of constructive support in place that diminished the individual's resolve to make irrational demands and, ultimately, they accepted responsibility for their actions